Kate Fleming is an entrepreneur, edupreneur, duly qualified solicitor and career coach.

She founded LawEd in 2010 and has single handedly grown it into one of Ireland's premier providers of legal education for today's young person/young adult.

Her mission is that the law is for everyone to understand and engage with, not just lawyers!

LawEd's mission is to bring about social justice, social impact and empowerment. This is achieved through onsite, virtual and online law courses that educates our young people about how the law relates to their lives.

In 2023, what kind of education does a young person need most?

Learning about the law and legal literacy is a prerequisite today so that they can stand up for themselves and invoke their rights. There is justice and there is accountability, and often a glaring distinction between the two.

Like maths, science and history, legal literacy needs to be offered to all young people today. They don't understand their basic civil and criminal rights and without this basic legal education they cannot comprehend the knock-on life changing consequences if they break the law or make uneducated choices. We instil in them that ignorance of the law is no excuse.

LawEd has created a hub where our young people can gain simplified, age-appropriate information to educate themselves on their basic rights and responsibilities' and more importantly take accountability for their actions.

LawEd offers content that can be delivered through onsite and virtual workshops tailored to each client's needs. We also have created a first of its kind in digital legal education for young people.

We offer a choice of 7 different eLearning law courses. These courses are also available to the private client:
